UNIT 1

Lesson 1A, Exercises 4 & 5

Conversation 1

H: Hi, nice to meet you. I'm Harry.
O: Hey. Olivia. How's it going?
H: Yeah, I'm OK, thanks. I'm a bit nervous though, to be honest.
O: Yeah? Why?
H: I don't know. You know ... first class, new people.
O: Yeah, I remember that feeling. Don't worry. You'll be fine. It'll be fun.
H: So, have you studied here before?
O: Yeah, I was here last term.
H: Oh, really? OK. And did you enjoy it?
O: Yeah, it was amazing. Our teacher Ángel was brilliant. Really great. So patient and helpful, you know. So, what about you? How long have you been learning Spanish?
H: For about three years now, I guess, but just on my own online. There's so much stuff available these days.
O: Yeah. So, have you learned much?
H: Well, my listening's improved and I've learned quite a lot of vocabulary, but I really need to practise my speaking more, you know. That's why I'm here. What about you? Why are you learning?
O: Well, I'd like to be a translator and Spanish is an official EU language and UN language, so ... you know.
H: Wow! OK.

Conversation 2

N: So, what did you make of that session?
G: Oh, um. Well, it was ... um ... different, wasn't it?
N: I'm glad I'm not the only person that didn't really enjoy it.
G: So, what's your name, then? Where are you based?
N: Oh, I'm Noah.
G: Giuliana. Hi.
N: Hey. And I'm originally from Canada, from Halifax, but I'm working in Santiago now.
G: Oh really? Nice. How long have you been there?

N: A couple of years now. Do you know it? Have you been there?
G: Yeah, loads of times. I'm from Mendoza, just the other side of the mountains. We can drive there in five or six hours. Great city.
N: I like it, yes.
G: What are you doing there? Are you working?
N: Yeah. I'm a researcher – attached to the university there. I'm doing work on climate change.
G: Wow, interesting. And are you presenting at the conference?
N: Yeah. I was on yesterday, actually. What about you?
G: No, goodness! The whole idea really scares me. I don't think I could do it. I'm happy just attending and going to the talks.

Lesson 1C, Exercises 2 & 5

1: My business partner is Māori and so I've tried to learn Te Reo Māori a few times over the years – without much success. I've picked up a few words here and there, of course – things like 'kia ora', meaning 'hello', and so on – but it's only these last few months that I've really had time to improve. I'm taking classes twice a week and I'm not there yet, but I'm getting more fluent. I can feel it. The language is an important part of the culture and identity of New Zealand and though most people in my class are Māori themselves, interest in the language is really growing. You'll often hear it in advertising and in music on the radio now, for example.

2: A: That was great. I really enjoyed that.
B: Me too. I think Marie is maybe the best French teacher I've ever had.
A: Hey, listen. I was wondering. Do you want to maybe meet sometime and practise a little bit?
B: Um. Well ... maybe, I guess. It depends.
A: How about tomorrow?
B: Oh, I can't I'm afraid. I'm working all day tomorrow. I don't finish until nine.
A: So, how about Saturday? Are you working then as well?
B: Um ... I'm not, no, but I'm meeting someone, I'm afraid. Sorry.

OUTCOMES

A: Oh, OK. Well, let me know if you ever have a bit of free time, anyway.

3: I'm Brazilian, so I speak Portuguese, but I actually speak German at home. People are surprised when they find that out, especially because my parents are from Russia and Turkey! They first met when they were both working on a cruise ship. He worked in the engine room and she was a cleaner. There was a kind of party every week and they met there. My mum said Dad was a really good dancer, which I find hard to believe. Anyway, neither spoke the other's language, but my mum had worked in Germany and Dad knew German from school, so that's how they communicated. They chose to settle in Rio because the cruises usually stop here and they often had short holidays here. It also stopped them arguing about whose country to live in.

4: It's not easy – that's for sure. The thing I find the hardest is remembering all the new vocabulary. What I usually do is record myself saying new words and phrases in my own language first and then in English. I listen and stop after I hear the words in French, then try to say them in English and then play the recording and check. So, for instance, I might hear 'un fort accent', and stop the recording, try to remember the translation, and then say 'a strong accent'. Like that. And I'm getting better. I understand more when I read and listen and the recordings help me see my progress too.

UNIT 2

Lesson 2A, Exercises 4 & 5

Conversation 1

R = Ryan; C = Clara

R: Hey, Clara!

C: What is it, Ryan?

R: Have you seen Karim this week?

C: Yeah, I saw him yesterday. Why?

R: Is he OK? I haven't spoken to him for a while, but the last time I saw him he seemed a bit down.

C: Hmm, I know. I think it's his mum.

Apparently, she's quite ill and he's very worried about her.

R: Oh no! That sounds like a nightmare.

What's wrong with her? Is it very serious?

C: I think it must be. He was quite upset when I spoke to him and he didn't want to say much.

R: Oh dear. That's awful. I feel a bit guilty now that I haven't rung him – I had a feeling something was wrong.

C: Why?

R: Well, I met him outside the university with Chris. Chris and I were chatting, but Karim didn't say much. In fact, he hardly said anything at all.

C: Really?

R: And Karim normally loves to talk.

C: I know. Well, he probably isn't in the mood to talk to anyone at the moment.

R: Oh dear. Well, if you see him, tell him I'm thinking of him.

C: Of course I will, yeah.

Conversation 2

B = Belinda; A = Alisha

B: Hello, Alisha! How's it going?

A: Great, actually, Belinda. I've just finished all my exams!

B: That must be a relief. How did they go?

A: Quite well, I think. I was really pleased with how I did.

B: That's great.

A: Are you alright? You look as if you need cheering up.

B: Yeah, sorry. I'm just a bit fed up with my accommodation situation.

A: Oh dear. What's the problem?

B: Oh, I've just found out I can't continue to stay where I am at the moment.

A: Oh no! What a pain!

B: Yeah, I know. So basically, I need to find another place and, to be honest, I just don't need the stress.

A: I can imagine. Can I do anything to help?

B: No, it's OK. I'm sure it'll sort itself out, but thanks.

A: Well, at least let me buy you a drink.

B: OK. That'd be nice.

A: What would you like?

OUTCOMES

B: A cappuccino would be good.

A: Anything else? A bit of cake? Go on, it'll cheer you up.

B: Well, I have to say that chocolate cake looks nice.

A: I think I'll join you – to celebrate finishing my exams.

Lesson 2C, Exercises 3 & 5

1: When I started doing talks at conferences, I used to get incredibly nervous. Even though I'd spent hours writing and preparing a speech, I was often sick in the toilets before the session, and sometimes forgot what I was going to say during it, which made things worse. Eventually, I started to question why I was doing this. When I teach normally, I have a plan, but I don't write everything down and I don't worry if I forget something. Once I started thinking of talks and workshops more like a normal class, I felt much more relaxed.

2: I went in feeling confident and it started OK. They asked me a bit about myself and why I wanted to join the police. It all seemed like it was going well – until they asked me to describe a situation where I'd had to resolve an argument. Looking back on it, I now see that it's an obvious question for them to ask, but I just wasn't ready for it. I just sat there umming and ahing. Then they asked if I could give an example of a time when I'd been under pressure and how I'd dealt with it. Again, nothing. Just an embarrassing silence followed by my nervous laughter. Obviously, I didn't get a place on the course, which was a shame.

3: I was going to work and this car passed very close by me and almost knocked me off my bike. I shouted out something – partly because I was scared – and the car stopped. The driver then got out and started screaming at me, saying I'd almost caused an accident and that I shouldn't be allowed on the road. Then just at that moment, a police car stopped behind us. Luckily, the officer had seen what had happened and got out and managed to calm things down. We kind of apologized to each other and then carried on with our journeys.

4: Some people are already anxious when they come to see me. I mean, let's face it, most people don't actually enjoy the experience. We have a few different techniques to distract patients and help them relax while I'm working on their teeth. One is playing gentle music in the examination room and I also have a screen with calming images on it. Another thing that seems to work is asking patients to take some deep breaths before I start and then asking them to focus on moving their toes while I work.

UNIT 3

Lesson 3A, Exercises 7 & 8

C = Claire; R = Receptionist

C: Hello, there. I wonder if you can help me. I'm thinking of going sightseeing today. Can you recommend anywhere good to go?

R: Well, it depends on what you like. There are lots of places to choose from. What kinds of things are you interested in?

C: I don't know. Um, something cultural?

R: Oh, right. OK. Well, quite close to here is St Mary's Church. It's Kraków's most famous church and very beautifully decorated. You can walk there in five or ten minutes.

C: OK. I'm not really a big fan of looking around old religious buildings, to be honest.

R: That's OK. I understand. What about Oskar Schindler's factory? That's very popular.

C: Actually, I've already booked to go there later in the week.

R: Well, in that case, you could try Kazimierz, the old Jewish Quarter, where Steven Spielberg filmed some of Schindler's List. It's actually quite a lively area now. There are lots of good bars and restaurants round there.

C: Oh, so that might be nice for this evening, then.

R: Yes, maybe. Let me know if you want more information about places to eat or drink there. Erm, then if you'd prefer something a bit different, how about a guided tour of Nowa Huta? It was a model town built in communist times. You can see what life was like in those days and there's quite an interesting museum too.

C: Oh, that sounds interesting. How much is that?

R: About 40 euros. I can call and book a place for you if you want.

C: What times does that leave?

R: Every two hours from outside the hotel and the tours last around 90 minutes. They leave at 10, 12, 2 and 4 o'clock.

C: OK, that's great. Can you book me onto the 2 o'clock tour? Then I can do some shopping in the main square in town beforehand.

R: Sure.

Lesson 3A, Exercise 10

Conversation 1

A: I'm thinking of doing some shopping today. Can you recommend anywhere?

B: Well, you could try Oxford Street. There are lots of big department stores there.

A: To be honest, I'm not really a big fan of department stores.

B: Oh, OK. Well, in that case, how about Portobello Road? It's a big street market. You can find lots of bargains there.

A: Oh, that sounds great. I love that kind of thing. Is it easy to get to?

B: Yes, very. I'll show you on the map.

Conversation 2

C: I'm thinking of doing some sightseeing today. Can you recommend anywhere?

D: Well, you could try the local museum. That's quite close to here. They've got lots of interesting things in there.

C: Right. I'm not really into museums, to be honest.

D: That's OK. In that case, how about going to the Roman ruins down by the lake? There are also some nice cafés and you can swim there.

C: Oh, that sounds better. Are they expensive to get into?

D: No, it's quite cheap. It should only be about 10 dollars.

Lesson 3C, Exercise 3

H = Holly; L = Lois

H: Welcome to a new episode of The Road Less Travelled, with me, Holly Bakewell. For those new to the show, I'm a blogger with an interest in everything about travel and in this show, I interview people I've met on my journeys in the real world and on social media, who are all doing something a bit different. With me today is Lois Schultz.

L: Hi! Thanks for inviting me.

H: And thank you! Now Lois is, I think, what some might call a dark tourist.

L: Well, some might, but I don't.

H: No – as we'll discuss – but before we'll get there, let me ask the question we always start the show with, which is ... have you visited anywhere interesting recently?

Lesson 3C, Exercises 5 & 6

H: ... have you visited anywhere interesting recently?

L: Yeah, a few weeks ago I went to a place you probably know – Glasgow, in Scotland.

H: You know what? I've never been there!

L: No way! Oh, you should.

H: I know, I know ... I'd definitely like to – the nightlife is supposed to be amazing.

L: It certainly is. We had a great night in a karaoke bar – super friendly people, super good time.

H: That's what I've heard, but that's not the only reason you chose to go there.

L: No ... so ... I also wanted to visit the cemetery there.

H: Because this is a thing you do, right?

L: I mean not only that, but it's something that helps decide my travel destination.

H: So, tell us about that. I mean, why cemeteries? What do you do there? How did you get into it? Don't you find it sad?

L: Oh right – yeah, so many questions! Well, to begin at the beginning, maybe the first time I went to one was when I was a teenager. I went to Paris with my family and because my dad's a big fan of The Doors, we had to go to the Père Lachaise cemetery, where the lead singer Jim Morrison is buried. So, I was feeling pretty fed up about going anyway, but also I hate The Doors. But then, when we got there, we had this guide and she was great – actually quite funny – and she told us about all kinds of people there and the stories about the place and it was just ... really, really interesting.

H: Yeah, I think a good guided tour can make such a difference.

L: For sure. Then, when I started travelling on my own, you know, I couldn't always afford museums and big attractions and so when I went to different places, I'd go and see the main cemetery.

H: Because they're usually free to enter, right?

L: Yeah, but also they ... they have this history and they're often beautiful. Like the one in Glasgow – it's set in these really beautiful surroundings and has some amazing works of art.

H: Yeah. You have some fantastic photos of it on your social media.

L: Thanks!

H: I notice you never feature in them, though. Are you camera-shy?

L: Not at all. I have lots of photos of me in other places, but cemeteries aren't somewhere to take smiling selfies. It's not respectful.

H: I understand. They're sad places, right? Which is why I talked about dark tourism. But you don't agree.

L: No, no, because, I think dark tourism is more about focusing on tragic events – battles, murders, natural disasters – and events which are often still quite recent. But the thing I like about cemeteries – and it's why I visit them – is all the interesting historic figures, poets, politicians, scientists you can find out about. I see cemeteries as a kind of celebration of past lives. I mean, some cemeteries actually promote that idea, like the Merry – or Happy – Cemetery in Romania.

H: Yes! What an amazing place.

L: Have you been there?

H: No, but I saw it on a travel programme here. And, as you say, it looks very ... bright and happy.

L: It is. It's great.

H: So where next? More cemeteries?

L: Probably, but actually what I want to do now is explore my local region more – it's amazing how little you know about what's near you.

H: Absolutely.

L: And I can't really afford to travel far now, so if I go abroad, I'll probably do something like WWOOFing.

H: WWOOFing?

L: Yeah, it's basically volunteering on small organic farms, in return for accommodation and the opportunity to learn about farming ...

UNIT 4

Lesson 4A, Exercises 4 & 5

Conversation 1

A: So, what did you do last night, Brenda?

B: I had a rehearsal for this play I'm going to be in.

A: You're going to be in a play! I didn't know you're an actor.

B: I mean, it's not professional or anything. I'm in a drama group at university. We put on all kinds of shows during the year.

A: Wow, great. So, what's the play? Do you have a big part?

B: No. It's this play called 101 Break-ups. There are lots of people in it and there's no main character.

A: Sounds fun. So, how often do you rehearse?

B: Well, we usually meet once a week, but now we're getting nearer the performance we have rehearsals three or four times a week.

A: Cool. Well, let me know when it's on and I'll come and see it.

Conversation 2

C: Did you have a good weekend, Domi?

D: Yeah, it was great. I went sailing with some friends. We hired a boat and went to an island off the coast.

C: Sounds amazing – it was so hot last weekend!

D: I know. It was boiling. It was actually nice to have the sea breeze.

C: So, were you actually doing the sailing?

D: Yeah. I grew up in Brittany, on the coast of France, and my dad used to take me out and taught me how to sail.

C: Wow, lucky you. So, how often do you go now?

OUTCOMES

D: I mean, whenever I can, but it's been a while because of work – and it's pretty expensive to hire a boat here too.
C: I can imagine.
D: Have you ever tried it?
C: No, never, but I'd love to. It looks amazing.
D: It is. It's great. I'll let you know next time we go.
C: Sure! That'd be brilliant.

Conversation 3

E: Are you OK, Finn? You look a bit tired.
F: I know. I didn't go to bed until two thirty.
E: Really? Why?
F: Oh, I invited some friends round for something to eat and to play chess.
E: Oh really? Do you do that a lot?
F: Yeah, a fair bit. Maybe once every couple of months.
E: Nice. So are you any good?
F: Not bad. When I play my friends, we play speed chess and I usually win.
E: Nice! So, do you ever play standard games?
F: Yeah, I play online sometimes, but not as much as I'd like to. I want to improve, but I don't have enough time to play.

Lesson 4C, Exercises 3 & 4

I = Ian; R = Rika

I: What happened there, Rika? Did you just sign that guy's book?
R: You saw that?
I: Yeah! It was like you were famous or something.
R: That's because, er ... I don't know. I guess I am, kind of – if you're a judo fan.
I: What?
R: Well, in my other life, away from selling books, I do judo and last week I was in a competition on TV. That guy recognized me from there.
I: Seriously? That's amazing!
R: Oh, it's no big deal. I didn't win it or anything. I lost in the semi-finals.
I: You got to the semi-finals! I can't believe it! I mean, no offence, but you don't look big enough to fight.
R: Well, you fight according to your weight in judo, so size doesn't matter. Although being big isn't always an advantage. It's more about balance. Someone can be big and strong, but if they're off-balance, you can easily throw them. I bet I could throw you over!

I: Hey, I believe you! So, how long have you been doing it, then?
R: Ever since I was a kid. At school, the big kids often used to bully me because I was so small and I got into fights, so my dad suggested I did a martial art to defend myself and that was it, really.
I: Well, you've kept very quiet about it. I mean, how long have I known you now? Six years?
R: Yeah, well, I don't really feel like it's connected to what I do at work and, I don't know, I think it's strange for me to just tell colleagues I'm a judo champion for no reason.
I: I guess. So, how often do you have to train?
R: Well, I usually practise all the techniques for at least an hour a day once I get home in the evening, and then two or three times a week I go to the dojo, which is like a martial arts gym, to practise with others.
I: Wow! And this competition the other week ... what was it exactly? Was it a big thing?
R: Um, yeah ... it was the women's national finals!
I: No! And you got to the semi-finals!
R: Yeah! I've actually won it before, so I'm a bit annoyed I didn't win it this time, but I had quite a bad back injury last year, which stopped me doing any training or fighting.
I: Really? How long did you stop for?
R: Well, I didn't do anything for a couple of months and I only started full training a few weeks before the finals.
I: OK. Well, it sounds as if you did well to get to the semi-finals then.
R: I guess. And the girl who beat me went on to win the whole thing, so ... still, I hate losing!
I: Amazing. You learn something new every day!

UNIT 5

Lesson 5A, Exercises 4 & 5

Conversation 1

I = Ivan; A = Amanda

I: So, what do you do, Amanda?

OUTCOMES

A: I work for a mobile phone company.

I: Oh yeah? Doing what?

A: I work in the design department. I'm involved in designing what you see on the screen of the phone.

I: Oh right. How long have you been working there?

A: It must be seven years now. No, wait ... maybe it's eight. I was 25 when I joined, so yeah, eight years. Wow! Time goes so fast!

I: You must enjoy it.

A: Yeah, I do, generally. It's quite varied because they're constantly changing the phones and designs, and it's quite a creative job, which is nice. But, you know, it's like any job. It gets a bit dull sometimes – and the hours can be quite long.

I: Yeah? How long?

A: Well, it depends how busy we are, but sometimes I do 50 hours a week.

I: Really? Oh! That can't be easy.

A: It's actually OK. I mean, it is a bit stressful sometimes but, to be honest, I think I work better under pressure.

Conversation 2

M = Marie; C = Carlo

M: So, what do you do, Carlo?

C: I work for the government, actually.

M: Oh right, OK. Doing what?

C: I'm an engineer. I'm involved in designing and building new roads and bridges and that kind of thing.

M: OK. That must be interesting. Do you enjoy it?

C: Yeah, very much. It's good to feel you're doing something useful, you know. And the money's good, plus we get a bonus every year, so

D: Oh, that's great.

C: And my job's nice and secure too, which is unusual at the moment with the economy not doing so well.

M: I hear you. How long have you been doing that, then?

C: Since I graduated from university, so about ten years now. Anyway, what about you? What do you do, Marie?

Conversation 3

D = Deborah; E = Ella

D: So where are you based these days, Ella?

E: Well, my apartment is in Munich, but I seem to be travelling pretty much all the time at the moment, so it's hard to say, to be honest.

D: I'm sure it's fun, but it can't be easy.

E: No, but my partner's great. They stay home with our daughter – so I don't have to worry about that – and I do love my work. The company made me manager for the whole of Europe and the Middle East last year, so ...

D: Wow, congratulations! That must be quite demanding, though, no?

E: Yeah, it is. It's a lot of responsibility, but I have a great team. We all work really well together.

D: Well, that's good. And how's business?

E: Great, actually. We're having a very good year – in a very competitive market.

Lesson 5C, Exercises 3 & 5

Conversation 1

A = Almir; L = Laura; D = Davina

A: I don't get it. You're not allowed to turn your video off? That's just strange.

L: I know, right. I mean, when we have team meetings online, we're generally obliged to keep our cameras off and to turn the sound off too.

D: Well, lucky you. They just told us that they think it'll help create a better atmosphere and that if we can all see each other when we're talking, we can read body language and see facial expressions and stuff – and that's supposed to reduce misunderstandings.

A: OK. Fair enough, I guess. How big is your team?

D: There's only six of us, so it does kind of feel more like face-to-face when we can all see each other.

A: Yeah. Maybe.

L: We sometimes have over fifty in our meetings, so ...

D: To be honest, I'm just grateful we're still allowed to work from home.

L: Yeah? You don't miss going into the office at all?

D: Not even slightly, no.

OUTCOMES

Conversation 2

F = Francesca; U = Ulrika

F: Are you thinking of buying that?

U: Yeah, what do you think?

F: It's alright, I guess, but it's not very you. I mean, I don't usually see you wearing such dark colours.

U: No, I know, but I've got this new job working in a law firm.

F: Oh really? Congratulations, that's great news! What are you going to be doing there?

U: It's just office work, really – secretarial stuff – but they have a very strict dress code. You have to wear blue, black, grey or white. That's it. No other colours allowed. Guys can't have beards; oh, and no tattoos – they're totally banned; we have to wear heels ... it makes us look 'professional' they say.

F: You're joking! Is that even legal?

U: Apparently. They sent one of my colleagues home the other day just for wearing flat shoes.

F: Wow! That's just mad.

J: Yep. But I was looking for a job for ages, so I'm not going to complain! I'm just going to keep my head down and obey the rules.

F: Fair enough.

Conversation 3

A = Adam, B = Bill

A: Bill, sorry to interrupt, but can I have a quick word?

B: Yes, of course. What's up?

A: Listen, I'd like to take the day off on Friday. My son's performing in a school concert.

B: Friday? I'm afraid that's impossible.

A: Are you sure?

B: Sorry, Adam. It wouldn't be a problem normally, but we've got a bit of a crisis this week. Vicky's off sick and we really have to complete this order by Saturday.

A: Can't someone else help? My son will be so disappointed if I don't watch him play. And I do have some holiday left for this year.

B: I'm sure. But if we're late with this order, we might lose the whole contract.

A: I see.

B: You're supposed to arrange time off with me a month in advance, you know.

A: I know, I know. It's just I've asked you at short notice before and it hasn't been a problem.

B: Well, as I say, normally it isn't.

A: Well, I guess that's all. I don't know what I'll tell my son.

B: I'm sorry. You'll be really helping me and the company.

UNIT 6

Lesson 6A, Exercises 5 & 8

S = Sales assistant; C = Customer

S: Hello there, can I help you?

C: Yeah, hi. I'm thinking of switching phone companies.

S: Alright. Well, you've come to the right place! Who are you with at the moment?

C: Blue. But I'm looking to see if there are any better deals around.

S: I'm sure we can find you something. What phone do you have at the moment?

C: This one, but they've offered to upgrade it to the S620.

S: OK, that's a nice phone. It certainly looks very stylish. How much are you paying every month?

C: I think it's 50 pounds and they said that that would stay the same. I get unlimited calls and messages for that and 15 gigs of data.

S: OK. Well, we could offer you a better model for the same price. For example, this one – the N570.

C: OK. What's the difference? They look pretty similar to me.

S: Well, with this one, the N570, you get a much better user experience. It's a bit easier to use and, as you can see, the screen folds out so it's about twice the size of your current phone's.

C: Wow! That's nice.

S: I know. It's impressive, isn't it? It's got a great battery life as well. It lasts for up to 25 hours, whereas the battery in the other phone isn't as good. It usually needs charging after 15 or 16 hours, so this one lasts a lot longer.

C: Oh, OK.

S: And then the camera is much better too. This one is 48 megapixels, whereas the one on the S620 is just 20 – meaning this one’s more than twice as powerful.

OUTCOMES

C: Right. And how many photos can the N570 store?

S: It obviously depends on what else you have on your phone, but it can easily hold at least ten thousand – that’s double the amount of storage that the S620 has. And, of course, you can always just store all your images in the cloud if you’d prefer.

C: OK. And what about sound quality?

S: Well, the N570 has a fairly large speaker built in on the back here. See? It’s about twice as big as the speaker on the S620, so no worries there.

C: OK. Well, I must admit, it is a nice phone. I’m tempted. And how much would I need to pay upfront for the phone itself?

S: Just 89 pounds.

C: 89 pounds! That’s quite a lot more than Blue are currently asking.

S: Well, I’m not sure we can go any lower for that phone. What price have they told you?

C: 65 pounds.

S: OK. Well, let me check with my manager, but I think we probably could match that – and still give you the better phone.

Lesson 6C, Exercises 5 & 7

1: I don’t like typical souvenirs like those little model Big Bens or tourist T-shirts or whatever. They’re a waste of money. Far better to have something you can consume. My neighbour’s Italian and he gave us this delicious fruitcake. Apparently, it’s very typical. Oh, what do you call it ... um ... comes in a box ... oh, panettone – that’s it! Anyway, yeah, we also went to Spain recently and I bought a few bottles of this drink called mosto, which is a kind of grape juice. Lovely, it is. We finished the drink in about two days, but I kept the bottle, as it’s actually perfect for keeping oil in.

2: My wife’s an English teacher and she gets all kinds of presents from her students. I guess it’s nice of them to think of her – and I know this makes me sound awful – but I just don’t want them all over the house! One student once gave her a present for me – a bright red silk tie with pictures of scary masks printed on it! Another time we got this plastic model of the Eiffel Tower with a light in it. I mean, it’s fine if you like that kind of thing, but I’m a designer! They’re not to my taste and I really don’t need them. My wife refuses to throw them away, though, so we’ve agreed to keep them in a box under the stairs.

3: One of my friends spent last summer travelling round Europe by train and she brought me back an apron from Lithuania, I think it was, to wear while I’m cooking. It’s the best souvenir I’ve ever had. It’s made from this beautiful material and it has a lovely stripy pattern which she said is typical from there. She’s clever, because she knows I love cooking and she’s also seen what happens when I cook. Maybe I’ll look a bit less messy now!

4: I visited the Czech Republic last year with my family and we went to Prague. While we were there, my daughter bought a glass paperweight with an image of the Charles Bridge inside as a souvenir. She was really happy with it. Then on the way home, the airline lost our luggage. The paperweight was in her bag so she was really upset ... but then they found the bags and when they arrived the paperweight was there and it was all fine. Big relief! Then, though, as she was putting it on her shelf, she somehow dropped it! It was awful! She cried for ages.

UNIT 7

Lesson 7A, Exercises 5 & 6

A = Aurora; C = Claes

A: They don’t have the menu in English, so shall I talk you through it?

C: Sure.

A: Anything I need to know? Any allergies?

C: Yeah, I’m allergic to shellfish.

A: Oh, right – so nothing with marisco then. Marisco is seafood.

C: OK.

A: So, for starters, the papa rellena is a potato ball, filled with beef, raisins and olives, and then deep-fried so it’s crispy on the outside.

OUTCOMES

C: Mmm, that sounds tasty – though, isn't it quite heavy?

A: Not really – I mean, the portions are quite small here. Then the anticuchos are a kind of Peruvian kebab, made from sliced cow heart grilled on a stick.

C: Right. I've never had heart.

A: No? But you're not vegetarian, right?

C: No, not at all. I suppose we've just never eaten those parts in my family.

A: Really? It's so good. Not tough and chewy – just nice and juicy.

C: What about the cevishi ...?

A: Ceviche! That's Peru's national dish. It's a cold fish dish. Are you OK with fish?

C: Yeah, usually. What else is in it?

A: It's basically cooked in lime or lemon juice, maybe special vinegar and spices.

C: OK. What do you mean by cooked? You said it's cold ...

A: Yeah, the raw fish is left in the lemon or vinegar for a while and the acid in the juice does the same as heat, so it's like cooked ... but it's cold.

C: Hmm, I'm not sure about that. I think I'll go for the heart. What are you having?

A: Ceviche. You can have a bite if you want.

C: Thanks. What about the main course?

A: Well, the bistec apanado, that's steak.

C: OK. I'm not sure I want beef if I'm having heart.

A: Right, so not the lomo saltado either. Do you like duck?

C: Sure.

A: You could have the arroz con pato. It's a bit like a Spanish paella, but much tastier, of course!

C: Well, you would say that! And the seco de ...

A: Seco de cabrito. That's goat meat cooked in a thick sauce – and served with beans on the side.

C: OK. I've never had goat either! What's it like?

A: Oh, I guess it's a bit like lamb, but with a slightly stronger flavour. I love it. That's what I'm going to have.

C: I think I'll join you – it sounds delicious. Do we need to choose the desserts now?

A: No, see how you feel. But if you have room, you must try the mazamorra – it's made from fruit and purple corn. It's my favourite.

Lesson 7C, Exercise 2

P = Presenter; A = Antonia Miller

P: Almost certainly, if you're listening to this show, you're a real foodie, someone who loves to find new tastes and dishes, make the perfect coffee or create something delicious from what's left in the fridge. And without doubt there will also be a lot of you that have at least thought about turning that passion for food into something you could make a living from. Over the next few episodes, we're looking at the variety of opportunities for food businesses and giving some advice. This week, we start with restaurants, and joining me is Antonia Miller, who is an investor in over 30 food businesses. Antonia, welcome.

A: Good to be here.

Lesson 7C, Exercises 4 & 5

P: Now, Antonia, I've heard that 90 per cent of all new restaurants fail within a year, so maybe your advice should be don't try!

A: Well, yes, it is risky, but here in the US, the figure's actually more like 25 to 30 per cent and then maybe the same again over the next two years.

P: That still sounds pretty high.

A: Sure. But all businesses struggle to begin with and food services actually tend to do better than others. And there are huge opportunities. Some estimates suggest food services will be worth over five trillion dollars by 2029.

P: Wow, OK. I notice you refer to 'food services' there.

A: Yes, because 'restaurants' doesn't really cover everywhere serving food, like coffee shops, fast food places, takeaways, food trucks and so on.

P: Sure.

A: And I think that is the first advice I'd give. You don't have to invest in the perfect restaurant. With restaurants, people often spend their budget before the first customer has eaten anything. But what will you do if you don't get as many customers as you hoped? How will you pay for extra publicity? What if your chef is sick? How will you pay for a replacement?

P: So, be prepared for unexpected costs, and if you don't have much money, start small?

A: That's right. These days, you don't even have to rent a shop or buy equipment to do takeaways. There are big kitchens set up in industrial parks where you can hire space to cook and have a website for orders.

P: And if you do that, you cut costs too.

A: Exactly. And then, if that makes a profit, you might then think about investing in your own place.

P: And if you are setting up your own place, how important is location?

A: Well, you can find it difficult if you don't have easy access and you don't benefit from being near other restaurants, but a clear concept is more important – I mean that's true of online food businesses too.

P: What do you mean by that?

A: Well, what are you offering? Is it a particular kind of meal? Breakfast is a growing market. Is there a health angle? Is it cheap and cheerful – basic ingredients and big portions? Who are your customers? Are they families, couples, groups of students? Again, people sometimes try to set up a business because they're into cooking, but they don't go beyond that. 'Nice food' is not a concept.

P: But you do need that quality and passion, don't you?

A: I mean, if you don't sell tasty food, you will fail – of course you will – but you need to ask yourself why customers should choose you in the first place. You have to offer something clear and different. And you certainly need passion to maintain a business because it's hard work with unsocial hours. But you need head as well as heart – you need people that are good with money, not just good in the kitchen. It is doable. Lots and lots of food businesses succeed.

P: What about you? Do you have any plans for any new investments?

A: Absolutely. I'm actually working on something called Genuine. It's using the idea of the industrial kitchen I mentioned earlier. We'll have a single website where people can order food from different cultures. And in the kitchen, there'll be chefs from those communities cooking their own cuisine. And if they're successful online, we might help them set up their own physical businesses.

P: Interesting. So, when will we see that?

A: Well, if everything goes to plan, we're going to launch our first kitchen in around four months' time, serving Genuine Moroccan and Genuine Vietnamese.

UNIT 8

Lesson 8A, Exercises 4 & 5

D = Daniel, P = Paulina

P: Wow. It's busy today.

D: I know – it's crazy. I was supposed to take a break an hour ago.

P: Yeah, I'm going back after I've had this coffee.

D: OK. Are you going to the thing for Holly's birthday later?

P: No, I can't. I have a class.

D: Oh yeah? What are you studying?

P: It's a counselling course for speech therapists.

D: Oh, right. What does that involve?

P: Well, you learn basic counselling skills. You know, how to listen and guide people through problems, but it's focused on the kinds of psychological problems people have when they have a difficulty with speaking.

D: And how come you're doing that?

P: Well, I did speech therapy at college and, you know, that's still what I want to do.

D: Oh right.

P: So, it'll be good for my CV.

D: Yeah, I'm sure. So, how's it going? Are you enjoying it?

P: Yeah, it's good. It's very practical. I mean, we have some lectures and seminars which are about theory, but most of the time we just practise with each other and a tutor observes us and gives feedback.

D: So, what about the tutors? What are they like?

P: Great. They're all very experienced and knowledgeable, but they present things in a very clear way, you know, they're, like, on our level. They're really good, actually.

OUTCOMES

D: It sounds it. And what are the other students like? Do you get on with them OK?
P: Yeah, mostly.
D: Mostly?
P: Well, there are one or two guys that aren't as supportive as everyone else. Like when we do the feedback after the practice sessions, they can be a bit more critical than the others, which is a bit annoying.
D: I can imagine. You want encouragement, not criticism!
P: Exactly.
D: So, how long does the course last? When do you finish?
P: I think there are 11 weeks left. It's a six-month course – an evening a week.
D: Do you have any coursework on top of that? I mean, is it assessed?
P: Not exactly. You just get a certificate for completing the course.
D: And to get that?
P: You have to attend 80 per cent of the classes and do an assignment, which is basically a kind of diary of our counselling sessions. Nothing too demanding.
D: OK. So, you don't have to do much reading?
P: There's a bit connected to the seminars and you could do more, but I don't have time on top of my workload here.
D: I bet. So, what are you going to do when it ends?
P: Well, I might actually do another course once I've finished this one.
D: Wow! You're keen!
P: Maybe, but as soon as I find a proper job, I'll probably stop doing any studying.
D: Sure.
P: I'd better get back.
D: OK.

Lesson 8C, Exercises 4 & 5

Conversation 1

A: How come there are so many kids around today?
B: Where have you been? The teachers are on strike. It's been all over the news.
A: Ah, I never watch the news ...

B: Oh. Well, if you did, you'd know all the schools are closed this week because teachers are demanding a pay rise.
A: Fair enough – they deserve the money. I can't imagine being a teacher myself.
B: Really? I always thought you'd make a great teacher.
A: Me? Why do you say that?
B: I don't know. You're pretty good at explaining things; you like kids ...
A: Ah, it depends on the kids. I mean, I like yours, but I'm not sure I'd be able to teach 30 of them, especially if they were causing trouble.
B: I'm sure you'd be OK.
A: Nah, I think I'd end up screaming at them. Honestly, I admire anyone who does that job – the pressure they're under – but I'll stick to my desk job, thank you very much!

Conversation 2

C: So, what are you going to do at uni?
D: Medicine ... if I meet the entry requirements – they're so tough!
C: Ah, you'll be alright. You've been getting straight As, haven't you?
D: Yeah, but ... we'll see. I don't want to bring bad luck. What about you? You could do medicine, couldn't you?
C: Me! You're joking, aren't you? I'd never get the grades.
D: You could – if you wanted to.
C: Ahh, maybe, but I'm not interested anyway.
D: Really? I thought you liked biology and stuff like that.
C: Yeah, I love it, but my mum's a doctor, so I see what it's like. I don't think I'd enjoy it. I'd rather teach science or something like that.
D: Really? Your mum isn't disappointed that you don't want to do the same as her?
C: Well, if she is, she doesn't show it and she hasn't pushed me to study anything in particular.

Speaker 3

In recent years, it has become accepted here, and in many other countries, that university students should pay for their education – either by borrowing the money or by paying extra in tax. The argument is that students will earn more from having a degree, so they should contribute more. I disagree. We shouldn't measure the value of a degree in terms of money. We all need graduates – we need doctors, teachers, engineers and all the other jobs that help benefit society. And society also needs people with good learning skills and critical minds to deal with our changing world. If university education was free, more people would be able to gain those skills and help create a better world.

Conversation 4

E: So, how's Angela doing?

F: Oh, she's OK, although she does complain a fair bit. It seems several teachers struggle with discipline, and they spend a lot of time just getting the kids' attention and making sure they're focused on what they need to do. I don't think she's learning as much as she could.

E: What a shame. She's such a bright kid. Maybe she'd do better if she was somewhere else. Camp Hill has a very good reputation, and the facilities are excellent.

F: I don't know. She'd probably get pushed a bit more there, but I think moving might do more harm than good. She'd have to make new friends and she's in the basketball team now, which she really loves.

UNIT 9

Lesson 9A, Exercises 4 & 5

A = Andy; G = Gitte

A: Did I tell you I went round to see Jon and Sara the other day?

G: No, you didn't. How are they? I haven't seen them for ages.

A: Oh, they're fine. They said to say 'hello' to you. You know they've moved recently, don't you?

G: Oh really? No, I didn't, actually. The last time I heard from them they were still renting that place near the centre.

A: Oh, OK. Well, yeah, they've moved, umm ... I think it was last month. To be honest, they seem much happier now.

G: Oh, that's good. So, what's their new place like? Is it nice?

A: Yeah, it is. It's OK. It's quite a lot bigger than their old place. The front room is huge – it's about twice the size of this room – and the whole place is pretty spacious.

G: That must be nice for them now the kids are growing up.

A: I know. They said the old place was getting a bit small for them all. They wanted separate rooms for the kids. They didn't want them sharing forever! That's the main reason they moved out.

G: So, what kind of place is it? I mean, is it a house or an apartment?

A: Oh, it's an apartment. It's on the third floor of an old block. It's not in a great state and they'll need to do quite a bit of work on it, but they have actually bought this place, so they can do what they want to it.

G: Lucky them! And all those weekends spent painting and decorating to look forward to!

A: I know! I don't envy them! It's got real potential, though. It's got a great kitchen – it's a similar size to yours, maybe a bit bigger – and it's got these lovely old wooden floors everywhere. And huge windows, so it's nice and bright. Then there's a little balcony where you can sit and eat in the summer, and a shared garden out the back where the kids can play and everything.

G: Oh, it sounds lovely. I must go round and see them sometime soon.

A: Yeah, I'm sure they'd like that. The only problem is, though, it's not as central as their old place was. It's quite a lot further out, so it takes quite a long time to get there.

G: Oh, OK.

Lesson 9C, Exercises 4 & 7

Conversation 1

A: Hi, I'm here about the room.

B: Hi, nice to meet you. I'm Karina. And you must be Chloe, right?

A: Um ... no. I'm Paula. I called earlier.

B: Oh, right. The 3.15. Sorry. Chloe's the 3.45. No ... the 4.15.

A: OK. So, it's popular, then?

B: Well, we've had about fifteen people view it already and have six or seven more today.

A: Wow, OK.

B: So, if you come through, you've got the bathroom on the left there, which all five of us share. Obviously, it gets quite busy in the morning.

A: I bet, yeah.

B: And this would be your room here.

A: This?

B: Yes. What do you think? It's nice and cosy.

A: That's one word for it, yeah. It's quite a lot smaller than I was expecting. I mean, I've seen bigger cupboards!

B: Well, that is reflected in the rent. You won't find anything else round here at this price.

Conversation 2

C: Remind me again where you're living?

D: Northgate.

C: That's it, yeah. How long have you been there now?

D: It must be about ten years, I guess.

C: Has it changed much in that time?

D: A bit, I guess, yeah. I'd say it's more popular than it used to be.

C: Yeah. It's quite fashionable now, isn't it?

D: It is, yeah. I'm glad we bought when we did. It was so much cheaper in the past. I don't think we could afford it here now.

C: I think that's the same everywhere. I mean, I'm renting and even where I am, it's not as cheap as it used to be.

D: Yeah, right. On the plus side, though, there's much less crime than there used to be and there are a lot more cafés and restaurants than there were when we first moved here, which is nice.

Conversation 3

E: How's the flat-hunting going? Have you had any luck?

F: We have, actually, yeah. We found a little place in Woodlands and we're moving in next week.

E: Oh wow, that's great. Congratulations! Do you need any help with the move?

F: No, we'll be fine, thanks. Grace's parents are going to drive us, so ...

E: Oh, cool. I used to live out near there, actually. Back in the day. It was always a bit of a pain to get to, though, being on the outskirts – before they extended the train line.

F: Yeah? It's much better connected than it used to be. It's only about half an hour into the centre of town now.

E: Right, yeah. And I guess the highways are much better than they were as well. So how much are you paying?

F: Two thousand eight hundred a month. For two bedrooms. So if you ever feel like coming to revisit the old neighbourhood, you're always welcome.

Conversation 4

G: Hello?

H: Oh, hello there. I'm just phoning about your advert online for the room.

G: Oh, yes – OK.

H: Is it still available?

G: It is, yeah.

H: Good, good.

G: As you probably read, you'd be living with my wife and I. We're both retired now and our kids have all left home, so there are fewer people around than before and we've got plenty of room. So, if you're OK with all that ...

H: It sounds ideal. I like a bit of peace and quiet. So, can I just check that you've got wi-fi there? I work online a lot so it's quite important for me.

G: Yes, of course. We upgraded to high speed a year or so ago, so no problems there.

H: Ah, amazing. So, when would it be possible for me to come and have a look at the room?

G: Well, we're free almost all the time. When works best for you?

UNIT 10

Lesson 10A, Exercise 5

L = Lyla; Z = Zahra

L: Hey, Zahra. Do you fancy going out later?

Z: Yeah, maybe. What's on?

L: Well, do you like modern art?

Z: Yeah, sometimes, I guess. If I'm in the right mood. Why?

L: Well, there's this exhibition on in town that I'd really like to go to. It's only on for another week or so and I've been wanting to see it for ages.

OUTCOMES

Z: Oh right, OK. What kind of stuff is it?

L: So, the main thing is this series of sculptures by a Brazilian artist called Jac Leirner.

Z: OK.

L: All made from things she found on different flights – like plastic knives and forks and magazines and stuff.

Z: OK. That sounds ... interesting.

L: And I think there are some other video pieces there as well.

Z: OK, cool. Let's give it a try. When do you want to go?

L: Well, the gallery's open late today. I think till 9 o'clock.

Z: Oh. I need to be up quite early tomorrow, so I'm not sure I can manage an evening thing.

L: That's OK. How about sort of mid-afternoon, then?

Z: Yeah, that'd work better for me. Where's it on?

L: This new place called Art Attack. Do you know it?

Lesson 10A, Exercise 6

Z: I think so. Isn't it that place near the river?

L: Nope. That's Hip Hub.

Z: Oh right. Well, in that case, no, I'm not sure.

L: Art Attack's in the centre – on Crown Street.

Z: OK. I don't know it, then.

L: You know Oxford Road, yeah? That's the main street that goes past the railway station.

Z: Yeah, yeah.

L: Well, if you have your back to the station, you turn right down Oxford Road. You walk about 200 metres and you go past a post office.

Z: OK.

L: And the next street after that is Crown Street. The gallery's along there, about halfway down on the left.

Z: Oh yeah, I think I know the place now. There's a big clothes shop right opposite, isn't there?

L: Yeah, that's the one.

Z: OK. So, what time do you want to meet?

L: Don't know. How about I just meet you outside at, say, four?

Z: Earlier is better for me, to be honest, so could we maybe make it three?

L: Yeah, OK. I doubt it'll be that busy, anyway. Maybe whoever gets there first should get the tickets, OK?

Z: Yeah, sure, but I don't think we need to worry. I don't think that people will be queueing up for it.

L: Hey, you never know!

Lesson 10C, Exercises 3 & 5

Conversation 1

A: So, how was it?

B: Oh, it was brilliant – much better than I thought it'd be.

A: Really? I'd heard it wasn't that good.

B: Well, me too, but I actually really enjoyed it.

A: So, what's so good about it?

B: Oh, the plot, the acting – everything. It's just really funny and it's quite exciting too. I don't know. Maybe it's because I didn't think it'd be anything special.

A: I know what you mean. You see loads of films these days – especially Hollywood stuff – that are promoted so much in advance, and everyone on social media is saying you have to go and see this or that. Then you go and it just ends up being a bit of a disappointment. It's nice to go to something that's as good as everyone says it is.

Conversation 2

C: Did you have a good night out? How was the concert?

D: Oh, we didn't go in the end.

C: Really? What a shame.

D: I know! Hans was going to pick me up at seven, but as it happened, he had to finish some work at the office and by the time we got there, there was a massive queue for tickets.

So, we decided we weren't going to get in and we went to a club instead.

C: Oh right. So, what club did you go to?

D: Radio City.

C: Well, that's supposed to be really good. It's quite trendy, isn't it?

D: That's what they say, but I hated it!

C: Really? What was so bad about it?

OUTCOMES

D: It was just awful – the people, the music, everything. It's one of the worst clubs I've ever been to.
C: Really?
D: OK, maybe I'm exaggerating a bit. I mean, it was OK to begin with, but then it got absolutely packed, so you couldn't really dance properly. And it was boiling hot, so you were sweating like crazy. And then they changed the music later to this heavy techno stuff, which I hate. And the drinks were a rip-off.
C: Oh dear. Maybe you just went on the wrong night.

Conversation 3

E: I'm so tired! I was out late last night.
F: Really? I thought you said you were going to have a quiet night in.
E: I know. I mean, I was going to stay in, but Clara phoned and while we were chatting, she mentioned she had a spare ticket for this play in town, and so I said I'd go with her.
F: Oh right. So, what did you go and see? Anything good?
E: Yes, actually. It was called A Man for All Seasons.
F: Oh! I've been wanting to see that for ages! It's had some great reviews. How was it?
E: Brilliant! One of the best things I've seen in a long time.
F: That's what I'd heard.
E: Yeah. It's so moving. Honestly, I was in tears at the end. And the whole production – the lighting, the scenery, everything – it's just really well done.
F: I'll have to go.
E: Yeah, you should.

UNIT 11

Lesson 11A, Exercises 5 & 6

Conversation 1

A: That's a nice photo. Who's that?
B: Oh, it's a friend.
A: And is that your cat?
B: Yeah.
A: It's so cute!
B: I know. Mind you, she's lucky she's still alive!

A: Really? What happened?
B: Well, when she was a little kitten, she actually got stuck inside the wall of our house!
A: You're joking! How did that happen?
B: We're not absolutely sure, because we didn't see her disappear, but we think she crawled through a little hole in the floor in our bedroom and then she fell down the gap between the walls.
A: Oh no.
B: Anyway, we were watching TV and we could hear these little cries coming from somewhere, but we were going mad because we couldn't see her anywhere. And then we worked out she was actually inside the wall!
A: So, how did you get her out?
B: We were forced to call the fire service in the end, and they basically broke a bit of the outside wall and they managed to get her out like that. Here, I think I still have a picture ...
A: Oh, look at that! Oh, that sad little face!
B: I know. I'm glad we found her.

Conversation 2

C: You'll never guess what happened last night.
D: Go on. What?
C: Well, I was working at home writing some reports when I suddenly noticed a group of crows looking quite excited. They were all making this awful noise, so I went outside to see what was happening.
D: And?
C: Well, the crows were chasing a little parrot up and down the street.
D: A parrot? What was it doing there?
C: I have no idea. I guess it must've escaped from somewhere. Anyway, it was obviously very scared and cold. I felt really sorry for it, so I chased the crows away. The parrot was then sitting on my neighbour's roof and I didn't want to leave it.
D: Yeah? So, what happened in the end? Did you catch it?
C: Yeah, I put some fruit and seeds on the ground to persuade it to come down and then, when it did, I managed to catch it with a box. We took it to the vet to check it was OK and we're going to keep it as a pet now. It seems quite happy to stay with us!

OUTCOMES

D: Well, that's good. Actually, it reminds me of something I saw a few weeks ago. I was coming home from work on my bicycle ...

Conversation 3

E: I really thought I was going to die. Honestly, I hope I never see another crocodile in my life!

F: I can imagine. That's awful! It actually reminds me of something that happened to me last year in Indonesia.

E: Oh yeah? What was that?

F: Well, I was there on holiday, and I'd decided to spend a few days walking through the jungle. On the second day, we were going along a path through the rainforest when suddenly these huge lizards came racing out of the bushes from all sides. They were enormous – maybe even bigger than me! Everyone ran away, leaving me with three of these monster lizards running towards me. I tried to scream, but just couldn't! I really thought they were going to eat me.

E: Really? That sounds terrifying! So, what happened?

F: Well, luckily, the guides managed to stop them by shouting and waving these sticks at them, and I was able to escape.

Lesson 11A, Exercise 10

Conversation 1

A: You'll never guess what happened last night.

B: Go on. What?

A: Well, I was walking home when I suddenly saw a horse, standing there in the street!

Conversation 2

C: I saw something really strange while we were away.

D: Oh yeah? What was that?

C: We saw this whale stuck on the beach.

D: Seriously? Still alive?

C: Yeah! It was actually quite upsetting! We phoned the police to see if they could organize help.

Conversation 3

E: I was just about to put my shoes on when I found a scorpion hiding in one of the shoes!

F: Really? What was that doing there?

E: I don't know. I guess it was just looking for somewhere to sleep.

Conversation 4

G: Then, after we failed to catch it the first time, it ran away up a tree and we spent hours trying to persuade it to come down.

H: Oh no! So, what happened in the end?

G: Well, eventually, we gave up. But an hour later it walked into the kitchen, looking for its dinner!

Lesson 11B, Exercise 6

Obviously, Wilson's story is a tragedy. He had no real idea of the power of nature and he died because of it. But I don't think he was stupid. Remember, he was shot in the First World War. Experiences like that can affect people in different ways and maybe those terrible memories are what drove him. Then think about his achievement. Just reaching the mountain was really amazing. All those difficulties he overcame – the flight to India, the walk, everything. And he showed skill in learning to fly, and amazing strength and determination to get up to the height he did – and he did so with very little support. That's so different to these people who pay to go up Chomolungma these days. They arrive in helicopters. They carry almost nothing and they're not just risking their own lives. If a rope broke, how many people would fall? If a guide got injured, these amateurs couldn't help. And with so many of them, serious climbers are often forced to wait in really dangerous conditions. And if that wasn't bad enough, they leave so much rubbish on the mountain – broken tents, ropes, empty oxygen bottles – things that stay there forever in the freezing cold.

Lesson 11C, Exercise 3

You've probably all seen films where people discover gold or oil, and they jump up and down celebrating their new wealth. Of course, oil brings riches, but academics have wondered if the discovery of natural resources is actually good for everyone. Surprisingly, they've found that economies whose main income came from, say, oil, tended to develop more slowly than countries with few natural resources. This discovery has been called 'the resource curse', because it seems that having a huge non-renewable natural resource might be a barrier to investment and development. Four main explanations are usually given for this: one, conflict; two, corruption; three, the higher value of manufactured products; and four, price changes. Let's look at them now.

Lesson 11C, Exercise 5

So, firstly, conflict. The argument is that because a natural resource can bring huge wealth, groups will use violence to win control of that resource. For example, local people may be forced to leave their homes so mining can start. That causes anger – especially if locals aren't paid to move. They might fight back and the region might try to gain independence from the rest of the country. But then, the central government, or even other countries, may send the army to defend access to the resource. And if a war's being fought, people invest in guns, not, say, education. Secondly, control of the natural resource can be won with violence, but it can also be won with money. In other words, corruption. Companies give politicians huge 'presents' to be able to mine the resource or to avoid rules that protect the environment. Politicians may then try to hide this corruption by giving cash to powerful individuals and paying very high salaries to officials. They may also reduce everyone's taxes to keep the public happy. All this uses money that could be invested in schools, hospitals, factories, and so on, which would grow the economy faster. The third point of the curse is the relative value of the resource compared to making products with it. The country with the natural resource may also lack technology to exploit it fully, so it needs foreign companies to help exploit it. While mining creates jobs and money, bigger profits are made by producing products from the resource – say, petrol from oil, or mobile phones from rare metals. These products tend to be manufactured abroad, so the country with the resource earns less money than the country with the factories. You might think the country would therefore invest in manufacturing, but that brings us to the fourth aspect of the curse: price changes. When the price of the resource is high, the value of the country's currency is high. As a result, the country's exports are more expensive and so manufacturers sell fewer products abroad. But they also lose sales at home because imports are cheaper! So, it's understandable that fewer factories are built. On the other hand, if resource prices are very low, the country earns less and might have little money to invest in development. And on top of this, prices of the resource constantly rise and fall, so along with the problems of conflict and corruption it's difficult to plan and develop other more profitable industries – which is why having the resource is a curse.

Lesson 11C, Exercise 7

But is the resource curse always true? In fact, there are resource-rich countries, such as Norway and Botswana, who some argue have managed to develop well. In fact, Norway was already a relatively wealthy country when oil was discovered off its coast around 50 years ago. However, since then it has continued to grow and pass its neighbours in income per person. But it's not just that Norway is wealthy, it's an equal society – in fact the most equal society in the world, according to the World Economic Forum. How has it managed to do it? Well, since the beginning, Norway took control of the industry and profits have been saved in a public fund. A small amount is used each year to pay for public projects and at the same time taxes remain fairly high, including a tax on wealth. This is possible because there is very high trust in the government. Data from the World Bank shows it is the fifth best country at controlling corruption. It has maintained and strengthened other industries so only 14 per cent of its income comes from oil and gas, and it owns one per cent of company shares in the world. So, while the discovery of oil may have been a curse for some countries, for Norway it really has been a cause for celebration – just like in the movies.

OUTCOMES

UNIT 12

Lesson 12A, Exercises 5 & 6

L = Lewis; J = Jessica

L: Where did you disappear to?

J: Yeah, sorry. I had to go and phone my brother, Noel. It's his birthday today.

L: Oh, OK. It's just that you were quite a long time.

J: I know. I was only going to be five minutes – just wish him 'Happy Birthday' – but once he starts talking, he doesn't stop!

L: Oh, that's like my mum. She can talk for hours. I sometimes think we could be on the phone and I could go off and have a coffee and then come back and she'd still be talking! She wouldn't have noticed I'd gone!

J: Right. That's a bit extreme ... I'm not sure Noel is that bad.

L: OK, maybe not, but it is sometimes difficult to stop her once she's started on a topic. Anyway, it sounds like you and Noel get on well.

J: Yeah, really well. Unfortunately, I don't see him that much now because he's living in the US.

L: Really! What's he doing there? Is he working?

J: No, he won a scholarship to study Physics at MIT. They pay for his fees, accommodation, and maybe a grant for other stuff on top of that.

L: Wow! He must be clever.

J: He is. He's really smart – always top of his class. But, you know, he's not one of those super serious clever people. He's really charming and funny.

L: Sounds like a great guy. Do you have any other brothers or sisters? I don't think you've told me before.

J: Maybe not. Er, I've got a younger brother called Greg.

L: And what's he like? Do you get on well?

J: Yeah, I guess.

L: You don't sound too sure.

J: No. I mean, he's nice and everything. We're just ... different.

L: Yeah? In what way?

J: I don't know. He's just so sensitive. I seem to upset him a lot, anyway.

L: Oh yeah?

J: Yeah, for example, he wants to be an artist, yeah?

L: Oh, right.

J: And the other week I saw him at my mum and dad's and he was talking about his big new art project – some kind of sculpture piece with video or something.

L: Right.

J: And I asked, 'So, where and when is this going to be on?', and he just got annoyed and went quiet.

L: Oh?

J: Basically, because it won't happen. He likes the idea of being creative, but he doesn't want to do the work. I've told him before: you need to be ambitious, push yourself more, or you'll never make any money.

L: Oh ... right.

J: What?

L: No, you're right. It's tough being an artist. It's just that ...

J: What?

L: Well ... I guess you get plenty of criticism in the art world and he just wants his sister to be there for him rather than ...

J: Oh, right. So, you think it's my fault?

L: No! I'm just saying ...

J: Whatever.

L: It's ... hard ... So, are we going for coffee?

J: I guess.

Lesson 12C, Exercises 4 & 6

Speaker 1 Caitlin

I met him while doing a summer job in England. We were both working in this café – he was in the kitchens and I was a server. Our boss was a bit of an idiot. She was really strict – she was always shouting at us and was just horrible. Anyway, we used to go out after work and we'd sit and complain about her. Nicolas would also make fun of her by copying the way she talked but saying ridiculous things. It helped us see the funny side of the situation.

Speaker 2 Sandra

OUTCOMES

We were dating for a while. I met him when we were studying in Rome on a student exchange programme. It was a great few months. He was always so much fun and so full of life. We tried to keep things going after he went back to Belgium, but it's difficult maintaining a long-distance relationship. We couldn't afford to visit each other very often and, in the end, we split up. We remained friends, which I suppose is important, but I sometimes wish we'd stayed together. Yeah, I wish we hadn't split up.

Speaker 3 Shane

I met him while I was backpacking. We were staying in a hostel and we had to share a room. We got talking and found we had a lot in common. We were joking and laughing straight away, and we ended up spending the next couple of weeks sightseeing together until I went back to New Zealand. We kept in touch via email and social media after that and two years ago I moved to the UK. Since then, I've been over to Belgium to see him a couple of times.

Speaker 4 Brigitte

I'd known Nicolas for a while before we got together. We were on the same course, but I didn't have much to do with him at first because we were often in different groups and we seemed so different. I think I'm quite sociable and outgoing and, as you probably know, he's a bit quiet and shy. It's not that we didn't get on at all. We'd see each other in class and in the library and we'd chat a bit. Over time, though, our chats got longer, and then, just before we left university, I asked him out on a date. He looked a bit surprised, but he said OK and we've been seeing each other now for about two years. It's a shame it took so long for us to get together, really!

Speaker 5 Franck

Nicolas moved into a place where my friend Jef lived. I used to be round at the flat hanging out with Jef. We'd play video games and chat late into the night, and Nicolas would often join us, so I got to know him pretty well. At some point, though, I had an argument with Jef and we basically stopped talking to each other. We're both very stubborn and even though Nicolas tried to sort things out between us, neither of us were interested. I kind of wish I'd made more of an effort, but ... there you go. Anyway, to cut a long story short, I haven't seen Jef for a couple of years now, but I stayed in touch with Nicolas and since he moved out, we meet up quite a bit.

UNIT 13

Lesson 13A, Exercises 3 & 4

Conversation 1

M = Maria; B = Belinda; A = Andre

M: Thanks for picking us up. It's really kind of you.

B: That's OK. It's no problem. So, how was your journey?

M: Oh, quite stressful, actually. It's a relief to finally be here.

B: No! What happened? You weren't delayed or anything, were you?

M: No, no, it wasn't that, thank goodness, but everything else that could go wrong did! To begin with, we almost missed the flight, because Andre didn't want to spend too long hanging around at the airport.

A: I've already said I'm sorry!

M: He said we'd be OK if we got there an hour and a half before take-off, but there was a huge queue at the check-in desk and then another one going through security, so in the end we only just caught the flight.

B: How come it was so busy? It's not really the holiday season.

A: Exactly. They were doing extra security checks for some reason.

B: Oh right.

M: Whatever! If we'd been there earlier ...

A: OK, OK.

M: Anyway, the flight was dreadful too.

A: Awful. We hit a big storm coming over France and it all got a bit scary ...

M: Honestly, at one point, I thought we were going to crash!

A: I was sweating!

B: That sounds terrifying.

M: It was! I don't want to go through that again, I can tell you!

OUTCOMES

A: Me neither.

B: I'm sure. What do you want to do now? Do you want to go and get something to eat, or do you want to check in at the hotel first?

Conversation 2

L = Lara; K = Kwab

L: Hi. There you are! I was starting to worry.

K: Yeah, sorry I'm so late. I had a bit of a nightmare getting here.

L: Oh really? How come?

K: Well, to begin with, it was still dark when I set off.

L: Really? What time did you leave?

K: Six. And then it immediately started to pour down, so the roads were really dangerous.

L: Oh, I hate driving in the rain – especially when it's dark.

K: So do I. That's probably why I took a wrong turning. I got completely lost and ended up going round in circles for ages. I couldn't work out where I was or where I was going! Then, when I finally got back onto the right road, I almost had an accident.

L: Seriously? What happened?

K: Oh, it wasn't anything bad. It was just this stupid guy in a big expensive car who drove straight across me. I had to brake to avoid hitting him. I wasn't hurt or anything, but I did have to stop and park the car for a few minutes to calm down.

L: Oh, you poor thing. That's awful.

Lesson 13C, Exercises 2 & 4

Conversation 1

A: What was the weather like in Peru? Was it hot?

B: No, it wasn't, actually. We arrived at night and it was freezing. Then during the day it was still chilly and cloudy.

A: Oh dear.

B: I wish I'd taken some warmer clothes. I only had T-shirts and one thin jacket.

A: Oh no!

B: It was stupid of me, really. I should have thought more carefully before setting off. I knew we'd be in the mountains and could have checked the forecast.

A: I guess, yeah. I don't know. Maybe it's just me, but I always assumed that most of South America would be hot, you know.

B: Well, me too, yeah! Silly, really! Anyway, we still had an amazing time!

Conversation 2

C: Hello?

D: Hello, Mum. It's me, Alan.

C: Oh, hello. I was worried. Did you arrive safely?

D: Yeah, sorry, we got here late – that's why I didn't phone.

C: Oh right. So, is everything OK? Are you both well?

D: Yeah, fine, except for the fact there didn't seem to be any heating in our hotel last night.

C: No heating? But it's the middle of winter!

D: I know. It was a really old building and the room was just freezing.

C: That's awful!

D: We were silly, though. We should have looked around more, but because we got here so late, we just chose the first cheap place we came across.

C: Oh, Alan!

D: Don't worry – we'll check the place out better next time.

C: I hope so.

Conversation 3

E: How was your trip to the coast? Nice and hot?

F: Yes, it was. It was boiling!

E: Lucky you! I bet that was nice.

F: It was, but I did get sunburned on the first day.

E: Oh no!

F: It was really hot and I was sunbathing and just fell asleep. The next day, my skin went purple! It was horrible.

E: Oh you poor thing!

F: Oh, it was my own fault. I shouldn't have stayed in the sun for so long, especially with my skin. I should've at least put on some sun cream!

Conversation 4

G: Hello, sir, madam. Are all three of you flying together to Munich?

OUTCOMES

H: Yes, that's right.

G: In that case, I'll just need to weigh your bags.

H: Sure.

G: I'm afraid you have to pay an excess baggage charge of 100 euros on this bag.

H: What? But there are three of us! The baggage allowance is 23 kilos each.

G: I'm sorry, madam, but the rules are very clear: the maximum for any one bag is 23 kilos, and this one weighs 33. You can transfer some weight to your hand baggage if you like.

H: How can we fit 10 kilos in there? It's tiny!

G: Well, in that case, you need to pay extra.

H: That's ridiculous!

G: I'm sorry, but it really isn't my fault. The ticket conditions are very clear. I'm afraid you have to go back to the desk over there and pay the additional charge.

H: But the queue is enormous!

I: I told you we should have brought another suitcase.

H: I just thought it would be easier with two.

I: 100 euros! That's such a rip-off!

UNIT 14

Lesson 14A, Exercises 5 & 6

Conversation 1

A: Hello, help desk.

B: Yeah, hi there. I wonder if you can help me. I've just turned on my computer and found that the internet's not working.

A: What? No! All of it? That's a disaster!

B: What?

A: Oh, nothing. Just my little joke. Have you checked all the connections? Maybe something's not plugged in properly?

B: I think everything's OK, yes. One minute – let me just have one more look ... yep, I've just checked all the plugs and everything again, but it hasn't made any difference.

A: Hmm. Well, in that case, there's probably an issue with the cable then. I'll come down and have a look in a bit, OK?

Conversation 2

C: Hello, IT.

D: Hi, I've got a bit of a problem. My computer crashed this morning and when I turned it back on, all the folders I keep my files in had disappeared from the screen.

C: OK. Well, you must have back-up copies somewhere, right? On an external hard drive or in the cloud?

D: I'm afraid not. It's stupid of me, I know, but I always forget to copy them.

C: Right. Well, in future, you might want to think about backing up more often. Have you tried rebooting at all?

D: Umm ... what does that mean?

C: Turning it off and turning it on again.

D: Oh, OK. I need these things in plain English, you see! But yes, I have and it didn't do any good.

C: OK. Have you tried searching for specific files by name?

D: No, not yet. Should I?

C: Yeah, try that and see if anything comes up.

Conversation 3

A: Hello, help desk.

E: Hi there. I've got a bit of a problem down in accounts. I'm trying to print some files and every time I go to select 'print' from the drop-down menu, my cursor just turns into that spinning wheel of death thing, you know, that circle that just goes round and round and round. I move it away with the mouse and it stops and goes back to normal. Honestly, it's driving me mad!

A: OK. That's a very specific problem. I'm not sure I've dealt with anything like that before. I think you may have got a virus. Have you run a security scan?

E: No, I haven't, but I could if you think it'll help.

A: OK. Well, try that and see what happens. It should find any unwanted software that's hiding away in there and it'll give you greater protection in future if you need it as well.

E: OK.

A: Otherwise, let me Google it and see what I can find.

Conversation 4

C: Hello, IT help desk.

F: Hi Bob. It's me, Martin again, I'm afraid.

C: Let me guess. Password problems?

F: Yes. Sorry. I'm just hopeless at remembering these things! What is it now? Three times this month?

C: At least. But don't worry. You're not the worst offender.

F: It's the age we live in! I've got more passwords than I have friends!

C: I'll reset it for you and email you a new one in a minute, OK?

F: Thanks.

C: Have you tried that app, by the way? I think it's called 'All My Passwords'.

F: No.

C: Well, try that. It might help. Otherwise, you might need to get some more memory installed.

Lesson 14C, Exercise 4 & 6

Hey there, what's up? Welcome to another episode of What's App? – my weekly show about what's going on in the world of apps. So, today I'm looking at three more apps that you, my wonderful listeners out there, have suggested for me. First up, we have something called what3words. Now, this is one of those things that's so clever it makes your brain hurt just thinking about it. In short, what it does is it gives everywhere in the world a unique, easy-to-say, three-word address that allows you to tell people exactly where you are – to the nearest nine square metres. That's like the size of the room I'm talking in now. So, for example, if I wanted to tell people where I am, the app might give me something like 'chickens.heavy.package'. I then tell whoever I'm talking to those three words, they enter them into their app and hey presto – they can get directions to the exact spot I'm in. It's amazing. Imagine breaking down in the middle of nowhere or getting hurt while hiking in the mountains. In situations like this, having a way of letting people know how to find you could literally save your life. You can also use the app to meet friends in parks or at festivals, say, and I'm sure it has plenty of other applications too. Oh, and did I mention it's completely free? Next up is a thing called Pl@ntNet, which quite a few of you seemed to think I'd find interesting, so thanks for that. Keep those recommendations coming. If you're a regular listener, you'll know how much I enjoy gardening, and so it's slightly embarrassing that I've not come across this one before. This app basically helps you identify plants simply by photographing them with your phone. It's got a huge database and on entering a photo, you get a range of suggestions that you can sort through. You can search by leaf, by flower, and even by region on Pl@ntNet and on top of all that, it's learning all the time. Every time someone adds a new entry, it helps the app identify things. In fact, a flower I entered that didn't have a match to begin with was then identified a few days later – because of new information someone in France had added. Finally, we have a bit of a weird one called Real Razor. Which is a strange name, really, because it's clearly not a real razor, but to give credit where credit's due it does look like a razor – an electronic one – and as you can hear, it sounds like a razor too ... and it even knows when it's near your head. Run it up and down your face and it starts with the hair-cutting sound effects ... but, of course, it doesn't actually cut off any hair. Because it's not a real razor. I'm guessing it's meant to be a joke, but I'm not sure what's funny about pretending to be shaving yourself with a phone. There you go. That's it from me for today. Remember, if you want to donate, please go to my ...

UNIT 15

Lesson 15A, Exercises 5 & 6

Conversation 1

A: Hello, Mr Gomes?

B: Yes?

A: I'm sorry. Have you been waiting long?

B: About two hours.

A: I'm sorry, we're quite busy today. You've done something to your ankle?

B: Yes.

A: Hmm, it's quite big. Does this hurt?

B: Yeah, it's very painful.

A: Can you put any weight on it at all?

B: No, no. It hurts too much.

A: Hmm. And how did you do it?

OUTCOMES

B: I was just coming out of the hotel and I slipped on the stair and my ankle, it just ...
A: You just fell over on it. Nasty. Well, I think we should do an X-ray. It might just be badly sprained, but it could be broken. You'll have to wait again, I'm afraid. We've been a bit short of staff lately. I'll ask the nurse to give you something for the pain.
B: Good. How long will I have to wait for the X-ray?
A: Hopefully, it won't be more than half an hour. Are you taking any medication?
B: Err ... I take something for my dust allergy sometimes?
A: That's fine. Have you ever had any bad reactions to any medication – aspirin or anything?
B: No, never.
A: OK, fine. Well, I'll get the nurse to give you something and then take you down for the X-ray.

Conversation 2

A: Hello.
C: Hello.
D: Hello.
A: Take a seat. What seems to be the problem?
C: It's my son. He's been up all night throwing up. He's hardly slept, and he had a high temperature – 39 – and his heart was beating really fast.
A: And how long have you been like this?
C: Sorry, he doesn't speak much English. He first said he felt a bit sick yesterday afternoon and then he threw up about seven and he hasn't really stopped since.
A: Oh dear. Any problems going to the toilet?
C: Actually, no. None.
A: And has he been able to drink anything?
C: No, that's the problem. When he drinks water, he's sick again.
A: Right, well, let's have a look. Can you just take off your jumper and sit up here? Open your mouth and stick your tongue out. Lovely. And now take a deep breath. Again ... breathe in ... and out. Just lie down. I'm going to press quite hard. Does it hurt? And here?
D: Hmm. It's OK.
A: Maybe a bit uncomfortable – but no pain?

D: Yes ... no pain.
A: OK, you can put your jumper back on. I think it's a nasty stomach infection – there seems to be one going round at the moment. We've had a few people in.
C: Will he need antibiotics?
A: It's a virus, so there's no need for antibiotics. I'll give him something to stop the vomiting and then he just needs to rest and take lots of fluids – water, tea, maybe some juice. OK? Any questions?
C: No, I don't think so. I'll explain to him.

Lesson 15C, Exercises 5 & 6

A = Alex; D = Dana

A: How was your holiday? You went mountain biking in Austria, didn't you?
D: That's right. It was great, except for James's accident.
A: Why? What happened?
D: Well, we'd been cycling in the mountains round Kaunertal, and we were going back to the hotel down this steep hill, so we were going really fast and James lost control of his bike on a corner and he went off the road. He just managed to avoid running into a wall and fell off. It was horrible.
A: It sounds it! Was he badly hurt?
D: Well, he was conscious when we got to him, but he was asking us where he was and what had happened.
A: That doesn't sound good.
D: Yeah, he certainly seemed a bit confused – and his helmet had come off so he must've banged his head.
A: Oh dear. Did he have any other injuries?
D: Yeah, he had a nasty cut on his knee which was bleeding really badly and he was obviously very bruised. He kept saying he'd be OK to cycle home, but he clearly wasn't in any condition to, and we were miles from anywhere and it was a really quiet road.
A: What a nightmare! Couldn't you call someone?
D: Well, we didn't really know who to call.
A: I guess. So, what happened?
D: Well, we were waiting for about half an hour and eventually this car appeared and we waved at it to stop, and the woman driving said she'd give James a lift to the nearest hospital. So, we got him and his bike into the car, and she took my mobile number and said she'd call me once there was more news.

OUTCOMES

A: Wow! That was nice of her.

D: I know. She was so kind. Anyway, we then cycled back to our hotel and waited to hear from her.

A: And did she call?

D: Yeah, after a couple of hours, she rang and told me they'd given James an X-ray and everything was fine and any cuts and bruises should heal in two weeks or so.

A: Oh, poor guy! And what an amazing woman.

D: I know. We did ask her if we could buy her dinner or something to say thanks, but she just refused.

A: Ahh ... People can be so good.

D: Yeah, I know. In the end, James spent the rest of the holiday hanging around in the hotel. He was desperate to go out with us, but the doctors told him not to cycle for a week. It spoiled his holiday, really.

A: I bet! It actually reminds me of this friend, Jess, who had to be carried down a mountain once.

D: No way!

A: Yeah, basically there was quite a tough section where she was climbing and she slipped and fell about 20 feet ...

UNIT 16

Lesson 16A, Exercises 4 & 5

Conversation 1

A: Did you see that thing on the Times website about the steel plant closing down?

B: You're joking! Doesn't your friend Cathy work there?

A: Yeah. I haven't spoken to her yet.

B: So, how come it's being shut down? Are they losing money?

A: Not at all! Apparently, they want to expand and the share price has gone up!

B: So, why close it?

A: The usual. They want to cut costs and increase profits, so they're moving production somewhere cheaper.

B: That's terrible! So, how many job losses will that result in?

Conversation 2

C: Did you see that thing on TV about that guy being robbed in town?

D: Yeah, shocking, isn't it? The victim's OK, though, right?

C: Yeah – they said he's recovering in hospital. But how can someone do something like that in a crowded place in the middle of the day and just get away?

D: Really? No-one offered to help?

C: No, and apparently the police are investigating, but no-one has come forward. It's like no-one saw anything.

D: It is bad, but I guess people are scared to get involved in those kinds of incidents.

Conversation 3

E: Did you see that thing about it reaching 50 degrees in Morocco?

F: What? 50? That's crazy! How can people survive in that heat?

E: I know, I can't imagine it.

F: Apparently, those kinds of temperatures can result in all kinds of issues. I mean not just people getting ill or dying, but all kinds of stuff not working properly ... I mean roads can melt in that heat!

E: Yeah, it's bad. I still don't think of heat in that way – causing damage – I only think about floods or hurricanes resulting in those kinds of immediate issues.

F: Yeah, well, we'll have to get used to it – they say we could experience those kind of temperatures in Spain sometime.

E: Really?

F: Yeah, absolutely! It already often goes over 40 degrees in the south.

E: Wow, I didn't realize.

Conversation 4

G: Have you heard the news?

H: No, what?

G: The health minister has resigned.

H: Really? Why's that?

G: Haven't you been following the story?

She's been accused of doing all kinds of things. Like apparently, she's been secretly working with one drug company to help them sign government contracts.

H: Right.

OUTCOMES

G: Not that she's admitted to doing anything. She's just apologized for 'causing the government difficulties'.

H: Right. So, what else has she been accused of?

Conversation 5

I: Did you see that video of the basketball player hitting a fan?

J: What? No.

I: Yeah, it was in the middle of the game, and he just went into the crowd and punched this guy – apparently, he claimed the fan said something and maybe threw a drink at him.

J: Wow. I mean, it's a difficult one. Obviously, you can never support violence, but these players must have to listen to so much horrible stuff, I can see why they might lose control.

I: Yeah. Apparently, he's refused to apologize and he's going to be suspended for the rest of the season.

J: Really? What about the fan – did they get banned too?

I: I don't know. He should do.

Lesson 16C, Exercises 5 & 6

Conversation 1

A: Who's the statue of?

B: That's Garibaldi.

A: Garibaldi?

B: You've never heard of him?

A: No, I don't think so. Who was he?

B: He was a military leader in the 19th century who helped create Italy as a modern country. He's like a national hero. He fought in South America as well. He was part of the independence struggles in Brazil and Uruguay. I think his first wife was even Brazilian.

A: When was this?

B: The late 1800s. I'm surprised you haven't heard of him.

A: Well, I'm not really interested in history.

Conversation 2

C: What do you do, then?

D: I'm actually studying to become a nurse.

C: Oh, right. Nice. Where do you do that, then?

D: Rosalind Franklin University.

C: OK, where's that?

D: It's just outside Chicago. It was originally, like, the Chicago Hospital-College of Medicine, and then I think something else, and then they renamed it in the early 2000s.

C: Oh, OK. Who's Rosalind Franklin then? I've never heard of her.

D: Oh, no? I mean I've seen a few things about her – films and documentaries – but basically, she was a scientist and she's like the mother of modern genetics, because she was a crucial figure in the discovery of the structure of DNA.

C: Really? Wow! I'm kind of surprised she's not better-known.

D: Yeah, well this is the thing. While she did a huge amount of work at the start of the 50s that led to the discovery, the final complete structure was declared by these two guys Crick and Watson. And they were the ones who were awarded the Nobel prize for it, while Franklin was kind of forgotten.

C: Right, so the university was recognizing her contribution to science.

D: Yeah. And maybe for the university it's a symbol of being inclusive. You know, like it's saying science and medicine is a career for everyone – no matter what gender, race or social class ...

C: Interesting. I'd like to find out more about her.

Conversation 3

E: So, what are you going to do while you're in Brussels?

F: Work, mainly, but I'm hoping to go to the Eddy Merckx metro station while I'm there.

E: Really? Why do you want to go there?

F: It's where they have the bike that he used to set the hour record.

E: What? What are you talking about?

F: Eddy Merckx? He's like the greatest cyclist of all time – he completely dominated the sport in the late 1960s and early 70s! My dad was a huge fan and I guess that then inspired me to get into cycling myself.

E: Oh, right.

F: You've never heard of him?

E: Err ... no. And you're not planning to go anywhere else, like the Magritte Museum?

OUTCOMES

F: Magritte?

E: The surrealist painter. He's Belgian too. He was the guy that did pictures of office workers raining down from the sky.

F: It doesn't sound familiar.

E: Ceci n'est pas une pipe?

F: Sorry, you've lost me.

E: You must know it! It's one of his paintings. It's a picture of a pipe and underneath it says, 'This is not a pipe' in French. You'd recognize it if you saw it. It's really famous.

F: Yeah, well, so is Eddy Merckx, but you didn't know him!
